Mistaken.

One of our Petersburg contemporaries asserts that in North Carolina the whipping post is resorted to as a means of punishment for certain offenses against the law.

Our contemporary is mistaken. Before the war, flagellation was the recognized mode of punishment for the crime of stealing and number of other offenses, but the times have changed, and our laws have changed with them.

Under the new-fangled Constitution of North Carolina, framed by the Radical Convention of 1868, the whipping post was abolished. In article ninth, section first, the State Constitution provides that the following punishments shall only be known to the laws of this State: death, imprisonment, with or without hard labor, fines, removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the State.

Individual versus Legislative Aid.

The Constitution of North Carolina, article eleventh, section eighth, makes it the duty of the Legislature to establish one or more orphan houses, where destitute orphans may be cared for, educated and taught some business or trade.

An orphan house has already been established, costing over thirty thousand dollars, and this commodious building has been donated by the Grand Lodge of Masons for all destitute orphans in the State.

The Legislature has been called upon to appropriate a fund not exceeding six thousand dollars per annum for the support and maintenance of one hundred poor boys and girls who have been placed at this institution, and who have been thus far sustained solely by private contributions.

We learn that it is probable the Legislature will not do anything for a cause which so plainly appeals to their sense of duty and humanity as well as constitutional obligations. A recess will probably be taken on the 22nd, and the members will depart for their comfortable homes, and spend the Christmas holidays in the midst of their families—who are removed from want and suffering and hunger.

Having refused to do anything in their legislative capacity, to aid the cause of the orphans, it is suggested that it will be a good act on their part, if each individual member of the General Assembly shall, before leaving for home, give one day's per diem as a contribution for the Oxford Orphan Asylum. As there are one hundred and seventy members, this would make the whole amount eight hundred and fifty dollars.

North Carolina's Opportunity—Let Her Start in Time.

Whether deservedly or undeservedly, North Carolina has won the reputation the world over for being a modest and unobtrusive State. Modesty in a State, like modesty in a woman, may be a very pretty and becoming quality, but in this utilitarian age a little self-assertion has become essential.

Before the war, the people of North Carolina were independent of the world, and did not require, as they certainly did not ask, outside aid or influences or enterprise, to assist in building up and improving the State.

But the times have changed. A new condition of affairs has arisen. The State has become impoverished through the calamities of a protracted war. Her every interest has languished. Millions of dollars of her taxable property have been swept away as if by the besom of destruction. A heavy debt, quadrupled by Radical mismanagement, fraud and corruption, hangs like a millstone around her neck, to keep her down in poverty and financial ruin.

For these causes and others which might be enumerated, it has become necessary for the State to throw off a little of that reserve which has given her a wide reputation for modesty, and to show to the world her matchless resources and capabilities, in order to attract the eyes of immigrants, and to bring Northern and European capital and energy in our midst, by exhibiting the fields of investment to be found within our borders.

It becomes our duty, therefore, to keep before the public through our newspapers and in every way possible, the claims which we make for North Carolina as being in many respects, superior to almost every State in the Union in the advantages of soil, climate, varied mineral resources and grand and magnificent scenery. Indeed, we believe that our State, take it all in all, can offer inducements to immigrants in search of cheap, comfortable homes, which can be offered by no other State. The healthfulness of our climate, the low price of our lands, the value and extent of our mineral deposits, the fertility of the soil in our Eastern counties, and the grandeur and sublimity of our mountain country in the West, are not sufficiently well known to the outside world to give the State that rank in the eyes of her neighbors and of foreign nations to which she is justly entitled.

In the report of Prof. KERR, our State Geologist, to Gov. CALDWELL, concerning the part taken by North Carolina in the Vienna exposition, he says our only error was "in beginning too late and doing too little, to get all the advantage we might from this great opportunity." The Professor says that the exhibition from our State was not surpassed or even equalled in range and completeness, or in the attention it received, by any other State collection in the American department.

Now, we can profit by our experience at Vienna. On the 14th of July, 1873, we will have another opportunity of showing to the other States of the Union and to the other nations of the world that North Carolina is a great State and that her natural resources are unequalled. And in order to aid the State in making a creditable exhibition at Philadelphia, it has been suggested by us that the Centennial at Charlotte offers a fine opportunity for the collection of the articles intended for the National Centennial.

The resolutions offered by Mr. JOHNSTON, of Buncombe, looking to the Centennial Celebration of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, on the 20th of May, 1876, at Charlotte, will doubtless be adopted by the Legislature. We appeal to our brethren of the State press to give their endorsement and sanction to an enterprise so patriotic and commendable, and which, if carried out successfully, promises the most auspicious results.

Let us hear no more about being too slow—about being too late. Let us start in time, and work faithfully to have North Carolina represented at Philadelphia in a manner worthy of our resources and of the character of the State.

With the possibility of war with Spain finally averted, with the revival of business throughout the country, with the heavy dividends to be paid in January, and with the banks already so strong as to announce a surplus of $10,000,000 in currency above their 25 per cent. reserve, business men think that there will be every opportunity for a safe and steady revival of general trade.—N. Y. Tribune.

John C. Heenan died worth $100,000. This was made keeping a gambling-house. He was put into the business by William M. Tweed in 1870. He had three partners, William Crigge, John J. Kelso, and Big Murrav. The four often divided $20,000 a month profits between them. Mr. Kelso ceased to be a partner when he left the police.—N. Y. Sun.

Sainte Marguerite, where Marshal Bazaine will end his days, is a small island in the Mediterranean, off the southern coast of France. It was at Cannes, the point of embarkation for this island, that Napoleon landed on his return from Elba.

What in the name of wonder is Berlin or the German Empire to do for clothes? The Free Republic, November 25, published in the city of Mexico, says: "A fire, causing a loss of 95,000 tailors, occurred in Berlin Monday night."

A Springfield (Ill.) editor who took a Turkish bath is now badly worried about his clothes. They are all two sizes too large.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

His Honor, HENRY POTTER, late Judge of the United States Court for the District of North Carolina, gave the following account of the benefits derived from the use of Dr. J. C. Williams' ANTI-DYSPEPTIC PILLS in his family, and considers them so valuable a domestic medicine, that he never suffers from dyspepsia, and he has found them efficacious in relieving many of his friends from the same complaint. As an appetizer, they are equally valuable, and he has found them to be a valuable remedy in all cases of indigestion. He is a gentleman of talents, industry and worth, and he ranks high in the science of medicine and the healing art.
